

A Historic Home With 'Seinfeld' History

Oct. 3, 2019 11:08 am ET

Location: Manhattan, NY Price: $8,650,000

An 1839 townhouse in New York's Chelsea neighborhood was used as the exterior for the home of Elaine Benes. It is listed for $8.65 million. —Adrienne Gaffney

Harry Azorin and Lori Monson were looking for a new home in New York, primarily focusing on Greenwich Village. But when they saw a historic townhouse in Chelsea, they knew it was the right fit. 'We grabbed the house even though it needed work with some of the structure because it just felt right. The house has a soul. Everybody comments on that. You just walk in the house and you feel everybody who's lived in this house has been a happy soul,' says Ms. Monson. They paid $950,000 in 1995. YOO JEAN HAN/SOTHEBY'S INTERNATIONAL REALTY

1 of 12

WSJ opens select articles to reader conversation to promote thoughtful dialogue. See the 'Join the Conversation' area below for stories open to conversation. For more information, please reference our community guidelines. Email feedback and questions to moderator@wsj.com.