The family of James Evans, the former chairman of the Union Pacific railroad empire, has put their waterfront estate in East Hampton on the market for $60 million.

Evans, a lawyer who died at 94 in 2015, bought the 6.7-acre property and built a home on it, his daughter, Carol Jepperson, told the Wall Street Journal. She said she used the property as a gathering place when Evans was alive, since his passing had made her visit less often, prompting the decision to sell.

Newbold told the Journal that current zoning allows for a new owner to build a 12,500-square-foot home on the larger parcel and a 6,000-square-foot house on the inland parcel. The outlet noted the potential to pursue a teardown and the property's location near East Hampton's exclusive Further Lane makes it one of the pricier homes to come on the market in recent years.
