

These days, it is not just a woman who can never be too rich or too thin. You can say almost exactly the same thing about skyscrapers, or at least about the latest residential ones now going up in New York City, which are much taller, much thinner, and much, much more expensive than their predecessors. Discover the new additions the shifting skyline for yourself, and see exactly what luxurious living is all about in exclusive, and highly sought after property in Manhattan – ONE57.

ONE57, formerly known as Carnegie 57, (nicknamed “The Billionaire Building”) is a supertall skyscraper that elevates New York living with the longest South-to-North views of Central Park ever offered in private residences. Walls of glass illuminate expansive homes of extraordinary scale and light. Pritzker Prize-winning architect Christian de Portzamparc creates a landmark among landmarks that has forever redefined luxury living in New York.

The residence apartments at ONE57 have panoramic views displayed vibrantly through glass walls, all at 1,000 feet above Manhattan. De Portzamparc describes the future landmark as being “integrated within the cityscape,” and that rather than merely standing out, the tower “naturally belongs” to the skyline.

ONE57 - A BILLIONAIRES' HAVEN

Heralded as NYC's most prestigious address, One57 was designed by world renowned architect Christian de Portzamparc. Located in the heart of the city on the premier 57th street corridor, this new iconic tower sits steps away from Central Park and the most celebrated cultural and entertainment venues, restaurants and exclusive shopping in the world. Soaring 83 stories above Manhattan, this Full Floor Residence truly defines a new era of luxury living in New York.

One57 residences surpass the highest of expectations that is suitable for the most discerning purchaser.

Danish designer Thomas Juul-Hansen was chosen to design the interiors of One57. Recognized for his expertise in designing some of New York's most notable glass curtain wall residences, his highly personalized style is present throughout One57. Taking a cue from Christian de Portzamparc's exterior, Juul-Hansen envisioned discreetly opulent interiors that reference the great French Modernists, such as Jean Michel Frank.

Simple French modern interiors offset the cityscape perfectly, offering a luxurious yet inviting environment in the heart of the city. The kitchens are designed by the award-winning British firm Smallbone of Devizes, and are handcrafted from solid walnut and include customized hardware and appliances.

Ertell, one of the city's most active developers in recent years, started the new tall building binge in the Plaza district with his One57 mixed-use tower at 157 West 57th Street. Be the first to call it home. This prized A line boasts truly stunning views that perfectly frame Central Park with interiors by Thomas Juul-Hansen.

There will be a large, private amenity space for residents in the tower, complete with a triple height indoor swimming pool, private fitness center and yoga studio, spa portico, and a library with 24ft aquarium. 24/7 security and concierge—in addition to the multilingual Park Hyatt hotel staff—are there to assist you anytime day or night. Expansive spaces that feature custom details, the finest natural finishes, and the most dynamic views of Central Park – ONE57 has redefined luxury New York living.
